Here's your front-row seat to what's happening in the design industry.

Is it a leap to say that Christopher Peacock put the classic white kitchen on the map? We think not! The renowned company, which includes a showroom in Boston's SoWa Art + Design District, marks thirty years of creating kitchens in exclusive homes worldwide. Cheers to Peacock and his team.

Kevin Cradock Builders, headquartered in Boston's Hyde Park neighborhood, recently celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. The company's portfolio has evolved from millwork and furniture, to small renovations in Boston's Jamaica Plain, to grand builds throughout New England.

With a new distribution center in Milford, Massachusetts, Cambria has made it easier than ever to select and purchase its quartz countertops. The facility provides trade professionals and consumers easy access to award-winning surfaces.

Charles Street Design, a boutique residential design studio in Boston, announced two additions to its firm: interior design director Katharine Mast and architectural design director Mark Wryan. Mast and Wryan each bring more than twenty years of experience to the firm.

Catalano Architects is also expanding. Lauren Cincotta, a recent graduate of the architecture program at Roger Williams University, and Alex Catalano, an architect from New York City-based Morris Adjmi Architects and son of the firm's founder and principal, Tom Catalano, have joined the team. "We are excited to support and mentor this next generation and work collaboratively on advancing the firm's mission," says Tom Catalano.

Matouk, one of New England's flagship brands, has ratcheted up its commitment to sustainability and corporate responsibility. After two years of meticulous work and dedication, the company was awarded the OEKO-TEX STeP certification for sustainable practices. Matouk is now one of only three STeP-certified textile manufacturing facilities in the U.S.

George Pellettieri, founder of Warner, New Hampshire-based Pellettieri Associates, recently passed the baton to the next generation. Pellettieri, who started the company in 1983, will transition to the role of senior consultant. His son, Graham Pellettieri, takes over as president, while daughter-in-law Jennifer Pellettieri has been named vice president and general manager.

After ten years of working for high-powered Boston design firms, 5 Under 40 winner Gabrielle Pitocco Bove has hung out her own shingle. The fledgling firm, Opaline Interiors Studio, focuses on creating personal, beautiful, and functional spaces for clients.

The New England chapter of the Institute of Classical Architecture & Art announced the winners of its Bulfinch Awards in September. Robert Orr & Associates, Catalano Architects, Patrick Ahearn Architect, Hoerr Schaudt Landscape Architects, LeBlanc Design, SLC Interiors, and Meyer & Meyer were honored in residential categories. We are thrilled to note that LeBlanc Design's Victorian Grande Dame project was featured in the November-December 2020 issue of New England Home.

Finally, congrats to Slocum Hall Design Group. The firm's modern prairie-style spa room received a silver award during Kitchen & Bath Design News's seventh annual Kitchen & Bath Design Awards.
